

TWO MORE CASES OF TYPHOID

Does It Come From Lack of a Sewer System, or From Impure Water?

SHOULD TANK BE CLEANED?

We now have two more typhoid fever cases in town, which added to the one from which Artie Bock is just recovering and the two cases at the Strom home makes a total of five cases here with in a short time, and the questions now uppermost in the minds of our residents is, from what source does the trouble arise? Many and varied are the theories advanced, but the majority of opinions cling to the two following causes: Either it is from the lack of an adequate sewerage system or it is contracted from the water. Of course these opinions are merely a guess but, would it not be as well for our village board to take a few precautions before a typhoid epidemic sweeps the village. Those residing near the ends of the mains have for a long time complained of the quality of the water and in some cases they have been unable to use it at all.

Others where only a small quantity of water is consumed complain of a gassy unpleasant odor arising from the water when the faucet is opened. May it not be possible that stagnant, impure water collecting in the ends of the mains has contaminated the entire supply. Or may it not also be a probable thing that the tank on the stand pipe is in need of cleaning. To be sure it is covered and no outside dirt can enter, but consider the condition of a water pitcher which has held water for a week then think of this tank holding water for eight years without a cleaning. Now would it not be wise for our village trustees to send a sample of the water, taken from various parts of the town, to be analyzed. Would not the prevention of one case of typhoid more than justify the trouble and expense?

Speeding Auto Hits Ditch

An auto accident in which one person was quite seriously injured took place in front of the S. LaPlant home last Saturday.

Four auto loads of pleasure seekers were on their way from Chicago to Channel Lake and upon striking the gravel road as they left Lake Villa they hit up a rather swift pace although they were unfamiliar with the road. As they neared the LaPlant place they did not slacken their speed and one of the machines striking a rut was thrown into the ditch. The occupants were thrown out and all escaped with only a severe shaking up with the exception of a colored man who was unfortunate in having one leg crushed and broken. He was given medical attention as soon as possible and on Monday was taken back to Chicago.

U. S. Department of Agriculture Weather Bureau

CHICAGO ILL., Oct. 12, 1915.

Weather forecast for the week beginning Wednesday Oct. 13, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C.

For the region of the great lakes—local rains are probable Wednesday and again about Friday in upper Lake region; otherwise generally fair weather will prevail. It will be somewhat cooler Wednesday in the upper Lake region but on the whole temperatures will be moderate.

Highway Notice

Notice is hereby given that the two commissioners of the towns of Antioch and Lake Villa, will receive bids for the grading of about one mile of road, running west from Loon Lake to the Fox Lake road, on the south South line of sections 18 and 20. Bids to be opened at the Village hall, in the village of Antioch, Lake county, Ill., at 8.00 p. m. on Saturday, October 23, 1915. The commissioners reserve the right to reject any and all bids.

Dated, Antioch, Ill., October 14, 1915.

WATCHMAN HEARS ROBBER, STARTS TO GET HIM, BUT DIDN'T

Thursday night robbers picked the lock in the front door of the Battershall store at Grayslake and after spending about all the time searching for cash that they desired, they carried the cash register outside and carefully removed therefrom the huge sum of 65 cents which had been left there by the owner. The cash register was found about block from the store, with papers strewn about as if the robbers, disgusted at finding so small a sum, had thrown the papers all over to show their feelings.

A watchman named Smith, who sleeps in the room above the store and is protected with a gun and a savage dog, is said to have heard the robbers. He got up and started to go downstairs. He got half way down, according to the report, and then returned to his room where he crawled into bed without further investigating to see whether his suspicions that somebody was in the store were correct. The dog, it is said, is a savage brute, but he also was carefully taken back to the sleeping rooms so the robbers wouldn't harm him. In this way the robber got away and the watchman and dog were unmolested.

Death of Mrs. George Hucker

This (Thursday) morning at one o'clock occurred the death of Mrs. Geo. Hucker at her home at Ingleside, the cause being paralysis. The beginning of her illness was four years ago when she suffered a stroke of paralysis from which she apparently recovered although she was quite ill for some time. Three years later she suffered another slight stroke, and since that time has been gradually failing the disease slowly creeping over her and rendering her more helpless each week. For several weeks her condition has been very critical and her death has been hourly expected for many days.

The deceased was well known here as they resided in this locality many years, their home being near Loon Lake upon the farm now occupied by Fred Rymer. Mrs. Hucker was born in Weeks and Lereus, Somersetshire, England, in the year 1864, and was 69 years of age at the time of her death.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, one son, Wm. Hucker of Lake Villa, and four daughters, Mrs. J. E. Lane of Ingleside, Mrs. A. W. Foster, Mrs. M. J. Murphy of Chicago, and Mrs. F. S. Morrell of Antioch.

The funeral will be held Saturday at two o'clock at Lake Villa church and the remains will be laid at rest in the Antioch Hillside cemetery.

Our National Deficit

How will the Washington government make up the deficiency of $100,000,000 that is now staring it in the face? President Wilson has already asked Congress that additional revenue be provided for the government. Is there a man big enough in the galaxy of statesmen who forced the present tariff law through Congress to provide a way? Mr. Underwood, Champ Clark and the ringleaders of both House and Senate told us that the present tariff would bring prosperity, and with prosperity it would bring sufficient revenue to meet the demands of the government. Has it done so? Has anything Mr. Underwood or Mr. Clark said about the tariff law come true?

These gentlemen had nothing to do with the European war and they could not foresee that a disaster to Europe imminent and that while it was an ill wind to those countries across the ocean it brought some orders to our factories, which would have been stagnant had not the Kaiser unsheathed his sword. The same situation financially as exists today has followed the enactment of every low tariff law Congress has passed. History is simply repeating itself.

His Hallucination.

"When I take too much quinine for my malaria, as I occasionally do," confessed the Old Codger, "it affects my head and makes me think very foolish things. I remember once of getting so that I heard queer noises in my head, and for nearly a whole day fancied I was an 'Hon.' and was being solicited by my many friends to run for the legislature."—Kansas City Star.

Daily Thought.

A man's own conscience is his sole tribunal and he should care no more for that phantom "opinion" than he should fear meeting a ghost if he crosses the churchyard at dark.—Lytton.

Valuable Nut.

British scientists have discovered that a nut allied to the nutmeg that grows in Brazil yields an oil of much value in the manufacture of soap.

MISSED STEP; PLUNGES TO HIS DEATH

J. Brenton, Foreman of Bairstow Coal Docks Falls 20 Feet to Death

EMPLOYED FOR 25 YEARS

Jas. Brenton, 50 years old, and for the past twenty-five years employed by the Bairstow Coal company of Waukegan and during later years foreman of their coal docks, plunged to his death in the dark shortly after 6 o'clock Monday night as he was walking along one of the trestles in the coal sheds.

The fatal accident was not discovered until nearly twenty minutes had elapsed between the time when the fall must have happened when the lifeless body was found by Charles Bairstow.

Brenton had been working on one of the derricks at the dock and when 6 o'clock arrived he turned the lights out in the shed and started to come down. His long experience at the docks made him familiar with every step in and around the high tracks and he always turned the lights out and climbed down in the dark.

It is believed that, as he was walking along the tracks, he either misjudged a step or stumbled over a piece of coal. Twenty feet below there was a small pile of coal. This the unfortunate man struck on his head and shoulder, fracturing his skull and breaking several bones in his face.

The other employees of the dock were getting ready to start for home when one of them noticed Brenton was missing.

"He must have gone home," Bairstow averred as he prepared to leave. "There is his coat and hat," another worker said, pointing to the garments hanging where they had been placed at noon.

"Well I know where he is then," Mr. Bairstow replied walking back into the sheds as though realizing that some thing must have happened to his foreman.

The manager of the company had not gone far when he discovered the still body lying on a pile of coal. Thinking that he was merely injured the Conrad and Wetzel ambulance was sent for. When this arrived the fact that death must have been instantaneous was discovered and the remains were taken to the morgue.

News of Brenton's death caused a great shock to his many friends. His immediate family were overcome with sorrow and his wife and sister were near a collapse. Brenton was well known about the city and had many friends in every walk of life. He was well liked by the men who worked under him and was considered a valued employe by the coal company.

His Intention.

"Being of no further use on earth," said Gaunt N. Grimm, "having grown thoroughly tired of trying to convince fools of their errors, feeling sure that none of the said fools will regret my departure any more than I should theirs under similar circumstances, and being as ready to go as I'll ever be, I shall now eat the large hunk of wedding cake that my niece has sent me."—Kansas City Star.

Aids and Abets Disease.

Doctors have learned that worry means insomnia, nervous dyspepsia, hysteria, that it weakens the bodily defenses and aids the attack of diseases of microbial origin. It is the precursor or predisposing cause of many bodily ills; it is the one thing which saps the patient's vitality—which, broadly speaking, is his power to will to get well.

No Argument Coming.

"Did you speak to father about me, Arthur?" "Yes, I did, dear, and he agreed with me heartily." "Then he said I might marry you?" "Why—no. I didn't quite get to the point of asking him that. I just said you were a fine girl."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Shortened Length of Lance.

The war lance of the middle ages was about sixteen feet long, the present-day lance rarely exceeds eleven feet.

BIND AND GAG BOY AND ROB SISTER'S BANK

Archie Jones, nine years old, was reading a book when his mother, Mrs. Josiah Jones, left him.

When she returned to their home at 403 Glencoe avenue, Highland Park, Archie told her of two desperate men who masked and armed—came in bound his arms, put a gag in his mouth, threatened to shoot him if he uttered a cry for help, called him names, stuck out their tongues at him, and then robbed his baby sister's bank of $1.

Archie says he stood there helpless, although raging and defiant, and chewed through his bonds in 20 minutes after the desperate desperadoes left. The Highland Park police are investigating. The bits of chewed gag were found on the floor where the chair, to which Archie had been strapped, stood.

The boy's father was out of town at the time, and did not return until a late hour in the evening. It was 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon before the Highland Park police were apprised of the alleged robbery, and immediately three officers were dispatched to the Jones residence.

The police are inclined to believe that the boy went to sleep soon after his mother's departure, and then dreamed on and on and on.

No one in the neighborhood saw the two men enter or leave the house, and no suspicious characters were seen in the neighborhood during the day.

Stove Factory at Silverlake

The Graf Stove & Range Co., is the name of the new concern that is erecting a large stove factory in the village of Silverlake. Construction work was commenced the first of last month and the buildings will be ready for occupancy the last of this month.

The company was organized with a capital stock of $100,000 with H. J. Graf and Theo. H. Graf of Louisville, Ky., as the principal stockholders. A large number of shares were sold to residents of Silverlake and surrounding county. H. J. Graf was elected president and treasurer and Theo. H. Graf, secretary.

The company purchased two acres of land just north of the village near the Soo line and Chicago and Northwestern railroads. Work was commenced at once and the two main buildings are to be 100x30 feet each and reach to a height of 35 feet. They are built of a combination of tile brick up to a height of 20 feet and the roof and rest of the construction of frame. Running the entire length of the building are large skylights, which face the west. There are also many windows on all four sides thus affording excellent light and ventilation.

Natural Inference.

"Day before yesterday," related the landlord of the Petunia tavern, "a fellow that had only been in town half a day walked into the middle of the street, right out in front here, gave sort of a shout, and dropped dead!" "Was the train so late that he expected to be obliged to stay here overnight?" asked a hypercritical drummer whose sales had not been all that he had desired.—Kansas City Star.

Investigating the Heavens.

Incomputable in value as are the discoveries that have been made in terrestrial affairs by means of the spectroscope, its most marvelous accomplishments has been the story it has told of the composition and movement of our sun, our fellow planets, and many of the great suns of the celestial canopy, star clusters, star multiples, nebulae and even elusive comets, which come from none knows where, and go to none knows where.

Matter of Speech.

As a rule the native of a country will naturally speak his own language better than a foreigner of equal standing. Of course, very few of us speak our own language perfectly, but still fewer speak perfectly any language besides their own. It is true that our characteristically careless habits of speech make the English of an educated foreigner more careful than that of the average American. It is not more perfect.

Not a Matter of Gossip.

"Ah!" I have often heard of you, Mr. Gloom," suavely said the representative of an eastern publishing house who called on only the few persons in each neighborhood who were of sufficient intelligence to appreciate the valuable literary works which he was purveying. "Uh-huh!" returned the dour and savage citizen. "Never heard of my being civil to a book agent, did you?"—Kansas City Star.

TO START HOOF AND MOUTH WAR

Experts Will Meet Nov. 29 and 20 to Plan Extirmination of Disease

CHICAGO IS HARDEST HIT

The first national conference of experts in hoof and mouth disease will be held in Chicago November 29 and 30.

The department of agriculture is sending out the call for the gathering with a view of deciding on plans to wipe out the disease. The federal government and each state is expected to have official representation, along with the packers, the stockyards, the breeders' associations, and banking interests intimately concerned with stock raising.

If accurate figures could be given the shifts in the stock industry of the country as a result of the hoof and mouth epidemic would be startling. Department of agriculture officials say that the business is moving westward with great rapidity, and they attribute this to the fact that the epidemic has taken business away from the former leading markets of the country.

Chicago has been the chief sufferer because Illinois, according to federal authorities, has been least disposed to realize the seriousness of the situation. Today practically the only state under a federal quarantine is Illinois, and that is in large part because some of the local courts in that state have been willing to interfere with the enforcement of the federal regulations.

Great sections of the live stock yards in Chicago, as they were described by federal officials recently are cleaner than ever since they were constructed, but there is no business going on because nobody can ship out of there.

In holding the forthcoming conference it is confidently believed that in the light of recent experience it is now possible to make rules under which a repetition of national epidemic will be impossible. But this will only be true if complete authority is established beyond possibility of interference.

Married at St. Peter's Rectory

The marriage of Miss Anna Ciel Bohrn, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bohrn of Channel and Howard H. Gross of Chicago was solemnized at St. Peter's rectory at 11 o'clock this (Thursday) morning. They were attended by Miss Jane Bohrn, sister of the bride and Floyd J. Frank.

After the ceremony a wedding reception was held at the home of the bride where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served to over fifty relatives and friends of the contracting parties. Mr. and Mrs. Gross will leave this evening for Chicago where they will make their future home at 1264 Montrose boulevard.

The bride is very well known in this vicinity and her many friends are offering the young couple best wishes for a long and happy wedded life.

Original Forms of Life.

It is believed that the original forms of life began in the ocean many millions of years ago, and at no time since has life there ceased. Many of the earliest forms are now extinct; others have gradually increased in number and variety from their beginning to the present time. How long ago life began is not known to have been many millions years ago, for the remains of extinct animals and plants are found in the oldest sedimentary rocks.

No Rivalry.

A visitor was being shown over a big cotton mill by the proprietor, who proudly displayed some of the fabrics produced. Holding up a piece of printed calico, he said: "Our latest pattern. Excellent work, isn't it?" "It's all right," said the visitor, "but you can't hold a candle to the goods we turn out in my works!" "Same line?" asked the host, somewhat offended. "No," rejoined the other; "ours is gunpowder!"

Conviction That Counts.

This imperishable conviction, that if a thing is right it will have to be, is the underlying rock on which all great character is built; and it carries in it a trust implicit if not explicit in the moral government of the world.—J. Martineau.

REV. E. K. HESTER RETURNS TO ANTIOCH FOR ANOTHER YEAR

After instructing its delegation to the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at Saratoga Springs next May to attempt to obtain the 1920 quadrennial conference for Chicago, the seventy-sixth annual Rock River conference adjourned Tuesday morning.

The adjournment came shortly after Bishop William Fraser McDowell had read his list of appointments. The appointment most of interest to the readers of our paper are as follows:

Rev. E. K. D. Kester is returned to Antioch for another year. His first year's work here was one of satisfaction to all and his reappointment is met with hearty approval from all sides. Rev. A. H. Fletcher is appointed to Hickory. Rev. J. F. Hutchinson is re-appointed to the Lake Villa charge where he has been for the two previous years.

Some of Antioch's former pastors who are well remembered here are: Rev. A. O. Stixrud who is returned to the Epworth church at Elgin to which place he was transferred from Antioch a year ago.

Rev. F. R. McNamer is removed from Prophetstown where he has been since leaving Antioch and is sent to Walnut. Rev. E. J. Aikin builder of the Antioch M. E. church is returned to Chicago Lawn. Rev. W. B. Doble is stationed at Wheaton. T. K. Gale who is quite well known here is again returned to Wilmette.

Rev. E. D. K. Hester was appointed as one of the seven on the finance commission and foreign missions. Rev. McNamer was appointed on the church location board.

Salem Man Injured

Benjamin Sumersky, a driver for the Lake Forest Ice company, whose failure to observe the rules of the road resulted in Elmer Hayes of Salem, Wis., being badly injured in an automobile collision on last Thursday night, was brought before Judge Randall at Kenosha, Saturday, charged with failure to observe the rules of the road. He entered a plea of "not guilty" to the charge and was held in bonds of a hundred dollars for appearance at an adjourned hearing set for Nov. 16. It is understood that later a civil action will be instituted against the company by Hayes. The Salem man had one of his fingers cut off by falling glass following the collision.

Novel Window Display

A novel exhibit is being watched with interest by persons who pass the Washington street window of the Rubin store, Waukegan. There, busily at work on honey, is a hive of bees which are working with all their might, putting up their winter's supply. The little insects are enclosed in a screen so that they are kept inside and it is not only an interesting but an instructive sight to watch them toil. It is the first exhibit of the kind in the city.

Few Killed by Lightning.

"In sheer desperation I went to the ministry of the interior and sought an interview with the baron, who, when I told him of the disaster, appeared greatly concerned, and went at once to the police department to make inquiry. Next day, however, he came to me with the news that the charge against my mother had been proved by a statement of the woman Ship-roff herself, and that she had already started on her long journey to Siberia—she had been exiled to one of those dreaded Arctic settlements beyond Yakutsk, a place where it is almost eternal winter, and where the conditions of life are such that half the convicts are insane. The baron, however, declared that, as my father's friend, it was his duty to act as guardian to me, and that as my father had been English I ought to be put to an English school. Therefore, with his self-assumed title of uncle, he took me to Chichester. For years I remained there, until one day he came suddenly and fetched me away, taking me over to Helsingfors—for the czar had now appointed him governor-general to Finland. There, for the first time, he introduced me to his son Michael, a pimply-faced lieutenant of cavalry, and said in a most decisive manner that I must marry him. I naturally refused to marry a man of whom I knew so little, whereupon, finding me obdurate, he quickly altered his tactics and became kinder, saying that as I was young he would allow me a year in which to make up my mind.

"A week later, while living in the palace at Helsingfors, I overheard a conversation between the governor-general and his son, which revealed to me a staggering truth that I had never suspected. It was Oberg himself who had denounced my mother to the minister of the interior, and had made those cruel, baseless charges against her! Then I discerned the reason. She being exiled, her fortune, as well as that of my father, came to me. The reason they were scheming for Michael to marry me was in order to obtain control of my money, and then, after the necessary legal formalities, I should, on a trumped-up charge of conspiracy, share the same fate as my mother had done."

"The infernal scoundrel!" I ejaculated, when I read her words while from Jack, who had been looking over my shoulder, escaped a fierce and forcible vow of vengeance.

"The baron took me with him to Petersburg when he went on official business, and we remained there nearly a month," the narrative went on. "While there I received a secret message from 'The Red Priest,' the unseen and unknown power of nihilism, who has for so many years baffled the police. I went to see him, and he revealed to me how Oberg had contrived to have my mother banished upon a false charge. He warned me against the man who had pretended to be my father's friend, and also told me that he had known my father intimately, and that if I got into any further difficulty I was to communicate with him and he would assist me. Oberg took me back to Helsingfors a few months later, and in summer we went to England. He was a marvelously clever diplomatist. His tactics he could change at will. When I was at school he was rough and brutal in his manner towards me, as he was to all; but now he seemed to be endeavoring to inspire my confidence by treating me with kindly regard and pleasant affability.

"In London, at Claridge's, we met my old schoolfellow Muriel and her father—a friend of Oberg's—and in response to their invitation went for a cruise on their yacht, the Iris, from Southampton. Our party was a very pleasant one, and included Woodroffe and Chater, while our cruise across the Bay of Biscay and along the Portuguese coast proved most delightful. One night, while we were lying outside Lisbon, Woodroffe and Chater, together with Ollinto, went ashore, and when they returned in the early hours of the morning they awoke me by crossing the deck above my head. Then I heard someone outside my cabin door working as though with a screwdriver, unscrewing a screw from the woodwork. This aroused my interest, and next day I made a minute examination of the paneling, where, in one part, I found two small brass screws that had evidently been recently removed. Therefore I succeeded in getting hold of a screwdriver from the carpenter's shop, and next night, when everyone was asleep, I crept out and unscrewed the panel, when to my surprise I saw that the secret cavity behind was filled with beautiful jewelry, diamond collars, tiaras, necklets, fine pearls, emeralds and turquoises, all thrown in indiscriminately.

"I replaced the panel and kept careful watch. At Marseilles, where we called, more jewelry and a heavy bagful of plate was brought aboard and secreted behind another panel. Then I knew that the men were thieves.

"Well, one hot summer's night we were lying off Naples, and as it was a grand festa ashore and there was to be a gala performance at the theater, Leitcourt took a box and the whole party were rowed ashore. The crew were also given shore-leave for the evening, but as the great heat had upset me I declined to accompany the theater party and remained on board with one sailor named Wilson to constitute the watch. We had anchored about half a mile from land, and earlier in the evening the baron had gone ashore to send telegrams to Russia and had not returned.

"About ten o'clock I went below to try and sleep, but I had a slight attack of fever, and was unable. Therefore I redressed and sat with the light still out, gazing across the starlit bay. Presently from my port-hole I saw a shoreboat approaching, and recognized in it the baron with a well-dressed stranger. They both came on board, and the boatman, having been paid, pulled back to the shore. Then the baron and his friend—a dark, middle-aged, full-bearded man, evidently a person of refinement—went below to the saloon, and after a few moments called to the man Wilson who was on watch, and gave him a glass of whisky and water, which he took up on deck to drink at his leisure.

"The unusual character of my fellow-guests on board that craft was such that my suspicion was constantly on the alert, therefore curiosity tempted me to creep along and peep in at the crack of the door standing ajar. A closer view revealed the fact that the stranger was a high Russian official to whom I had once been introduced at the government palace at Helsingfors, the Privy Councillor and Senator Paul Polovostoff. They were smoking together, and were discussing in Russian the means by which he, Polovostoff, had arranged to obtain plans of some new British fortifications at Gibraltar. From what he said, it seemed that some Russian woman, married to an Englishman, a captain in the garrison, had been impressed into the secret service against her will, but that she had, in order to save herself, promised to obtain the photographs and plans that were required. I heard the Englishman's name, and I resolved to take some steps to inform him in secret of the intentions of the Russian agent.

"Presently the two men took fresh cigars, ascended on deck, and cast themselves in the long cane chairs amidships. Still all curiosity to hear further details on the ingenious piece of espionage against my own nation, I took off my shoes and crept up to a spot where I could crouch unseen, and overhear their conversation, for the Italian night was calm and still. They talked mainly about affairs in Finland, and with some of Oberg's expressions of opinion Polovostoff ventured to differ. Suddenly, while the privy councillor lay back in his chair, pulling thoughtfully at his cigar, there was a bright, blood-red flash, a dull report, and a man's short, agonized cry. Startled, I leaned around the corner of the deckhouse, when, to my abject horror, I saw under the electric rays the czar's privy councillor lying face down in his chair with part of his face blown away. Then the hideous truth in an instant became apparent. The cigar which Oberg had pressed upon him down in the saloon had exploded, and the small missile concealed inside the diabolical contrivance had passed upwards into his brain. For a moment I stood utterly stupefied, yet as I looked I saw the baron, in a paroxysm of rage, shake his fist in the dead man's face and cry with a fearful imprecation: 'You who have plotted to replace hound! You have plotted to replace hound! You intended me in the czar's favor. You intended to become governor-general of Finland! You knew certain facts which I intended to put before his majesty, knowing that my disgrace would result in my disgrace and downfall. But, you infernal cur, you did not know that those who attempt to thwart Xavier Oberg either die by accident or go for life to Kajana or the mines!' And he spurned the body with his foot and laughed to himself as he gloated over his dastardly crime.

"I watched his rage, unable to utter a single word. I saw him, after he had searched the dead man's pockets, raise the inert body with its awful featureless face and drag it to the bulwarks. Then I rushed forward and faced him.

"In an instant he sprang at me, and I screamed. But no aid came. The man Wilson was sleeping soundly in the bows, for the whisky he had given him had been doctored," went on the narrative. "Upon his face was a fierce, murderous look such as I had never seen before. 'You!' he screamed, his dark eyes starting from their sockets as he realized that I had been a witness of his cowardly crime. 'You have spied upon me, girl!' he hissed, 'and you shall die also!' I sank upon my knees imploring him to spare me, but he only laughed at my entreaty. 'See!' he cried, 'as you saw how he enjoyed his cigar, you may as well see this!' And with an effort he raised the dead body in his arms, poised it for a moment on the vessel's side, and then, with a hoarse laugh of triumph, heaved it into the sea. There was a splash, and then we were alone. 'And you!' he cried in a fierce voice—'you who have spied upon me—you will follow! The water there will close your chatter mouth!' I shrieked, begged, and implored, but his trembling hands were upon my throat. First he dragged me to my feet, then he threw me upon my knees, and at last, with that grim brutality which characterizes him, he directed me to go and get a mop and bucket from the fore-cabin and remove the dark red stains from the chair and deck. This he actually forced me to do, gloating over my horror as I removed for him the traces of his cowardly crime. Then, with his hand upon my shoulder, he said: 'Girl! Recollect that you keep to-night's work secret. If not, you shall die a death more painful than that dog has died—one in which you shall experience all the tortures of the damned. Recollect, not a single word—or death! Now, go to your cabin, and never pry into my affairs again.'

"A great sensation was caused when the body was discovered. The squadrons were lying off Naples about a week after the Iris had left, and while we were there the body was washed up near Sorrento. At first but little notice was taken of it, but by the marks on the dead man's linen it was discovered that he was Polovostoff, one of the highest Russian officials, who had, it was said, been warned on several occasions by the nihilists. It was, therefore, concluded that his death had been due to nihilist vengeance.

"The real reason why the baron spared my life was because, if I died, my fortune would pass to a distant cousin living at Durham. Yet his manner towards me was now most polite and pleasant—a change that I felt boded no good. He intended to obtain my money by marrying me to his son Michael, whose evil reputation as a gambler was well known in Petersburg. We traveled back to Finland in the autumn, and in the winter he took me to stay with his sister in Nice. Yet almost daily he referred to that tragedy if ever I uttered a single word, or even admitted that I had ever seen the man who was his rival and his victim."

"Last June," commenced another paragraph, "we were in Helsingfors, when one day the baron called me suddenly and told me to prepare for a journey. We were to cross to Stockholm and thence to Hull, where the Iris was awaiting us, for Mr. Leitcourt and Muriel had invited us for a summer cruise to the Greek islands. We boarded the yacht much against my will, yet I was powerless, and dare not allege the facts that I had already established concerning our fellow-guests. Muriel and I, it seems, were taken merely in order to blind the shore-guards and customs officials as to the real nature of the vessel, which went safely out of the channel, was repainted and renamed the Lola, until her exterior presented quite a different appearance from the Iris.

When Everyone Was Asleep I Crept Out and Unscrewed the Panel.

"The port of Leghorn was our first place of call, and for some reason we ran purposely upon a sandbank and were towed off by Italian torpedo boats. Next evening you came on board and dined, Muriel and myself having strict orders not to show ourselves. We, however, watched you, and I saw you pick up my photograph which I had that day torn up. Then immediately after you had left Woodroffe, Chater and Mackintosh went ashore and were away a couple of hours in the middle of the night. Just before they returned the baron rapped at the door of my cabin, saying that he must go ashore, and telling me to dress and accompany him. He would never allow me the luxury of a maid, fearing, I suppose, that she might learn too much. In obedience I rose and dressed, and when I went forth he told me to get my traveling cloak and dressing bag, adding that he was compelled to go north, as to continue the cruise would occupy too much time. He was due back at his official duties, he said. As soon as I had finished packing, the three men returned to the vessel, all of them looking dark-faced and disappointed. Woodroffe whispered some words to the baron, after which I went to Muriel's cabin and wished her good-by, and we went ashore, taking the train first to Colle Salvetti, thence to Pisa, and afterwards to the beautiful old city of Siena, which I had so longed to see. One of my teeth gave me pain, and the baron, after a couple of days at the Hotel de Sienne, took me to a queer-looking little old Italian—a dentist who, he said, enjoyed an excellent reputation. I was quick to notice that the two men had met before, and as I sat in the chair and gas was given to me I saw them exchange meaningful glances. In a few moments I became insensible, but when I awoke an hour later I was astounded to feel a curious soreness in my ears. My tongue, too, seemed paralyzed, and in a few moments the awful truth dawned upon me. I had been rendered deaf and dumb!

"The baron pretended to be greatly concerned about me," it went on, "but I quickly realized that I had been the victim of a foul and dastardly plot, and that he had conceived it, fearing lest I might speak the truth concerning the Privy Councillor Polovostoff, for of exposure he lived in constant fear. To encompass my end would be against his own interests, as he would lose my fortune, so he had silenced me lest I should reveal the terrible truth concerning both him and his associates. He was not rich, and I have reason to believe that from time to time he gave information as to persons who possessed valuable jewels, and thus shared in the plunder obtained by those on the yacht."

"From Italy we traveled on to Berlin, thence to Petersburg, and back to dreary Helsingfors. Journeying as quickly as we could, yet never allowing me opportunity of being with strangers. Both my ears and tongue were very painful, but I said nothing. He was surely a fiend in a black coat, and my only thought now was how to escape him. From the moment when that so-called dentist had ruined my hearing and deprived me of power of speech, he kept me aloof from everyone. The fear that I should reveal everything had apparently grown to haunt him, and he had conceived that terrible mode of silencing my lips. But the true depth of his villainy was not yet apparent until I was back in Finland."

"On the night of our arrival he called in his son, who had traveled with us from Petersburg, and in writing again demanded that I should marry him. I wrote my reply—a firm refusal. He struck the table angrily with his first and wrote saying that I should either marry his son or die. Then next day, while walking alone out beyond the town of Helsingfors, as I often used to do, I was arrested upon the false charge of an attempt upon the life of Madame Yakuroff and transported, without trial, to the terrible fortress of Kajana, some of the horrors of which you have yourself experienced. The charge against me was necessary before I could be incarcerated there, but once within, it was the scheme of the governor-general to obtain my consent to the marriage by threats and by the constant terrors of the place. He even went so far as to obtain a ministerial order for my banishment to Saghalien and brought it to me to Kajana, declaring that if in one month I did not consent he should allow me to be sent to exile. While I was in Kajana he knew that his secret was safe, therefore by every means in his power he urged me to consent to the odious union.

"All the rest is known to you—how Providence directed you to me as my deliverer, and how Woodroffe followed you in secret, and pretending to be my friend, took me with him to Petersburg. He had learned of my fortune from the baron, and intended to marry me himself. But now that all is over it appears to me like some terrible dream. I never believed that so much filiquity existed in the world, or that men could fight a defenseless woman with such double-dealing and cruel ingenuity. Ah! the tortures I endured in Kajana are beyond human conception. Yet surely Oberg and Woodroffe will obtain their well-merited deserts—if not in this world, then in the world to come. Are we not taught by Holy Writ to forgive our enemies? Therefore, let us forgive."

"There my silent love's strange story ended. A bald, straightforward narrative that held us all for some moments absolutely speechless—one of the strangest and most startling stories ever revealed.

She watched every expression of my countenance, and then, when I had finished reading and placed my arm tenderly about her slim waist, she raised her beautiful face to mine to receive the passionate kiss I imprinted upon those soft, full lips.

"This, of course, makes everything plain," exclaimed Jack. "Polovostoff was a very liberal minded and upright official who was greatly in the favor of the czar, and a serious rival to Oberg, whose drastic and merciless methods in Finland were not exactly approved by the emperor. The baron was well aware of this, and by ingeniously entangling him on board the Iris he succeeded by handing that small bomb concealed in a cigar—a nihilist contrivance that had probably been seized by his police in Finland—in freeing himself from the rival who was destined to occupy his post."

"Yes," I said with a sigh. "The mystery is cleared up. It is true, my poor Elma is still the victim. And I kissed my love passionately again and again upon the lips."

THE END.

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

Birds of the White House Enjoy Shower Baths

WASHINGTON.—The feathered tenants of the White House grounds have discovered the delights of the shower bath. And birds of many kinds are taking advantage of the excellent accommodations provided by the rotary lawn sprinkler.

The blackbirds, most inquisitive and curious of all birds, first found out about it. It may have been accident that led the bird Columbus in this exploit under the spattering drops of water thrown off by the sprinkler. If so he found it good. Generous, or unable to keep his counsel, he spread the news. Other blackbirds tried it with resulting delight. Then the tale spread of this advance in bird civilization.

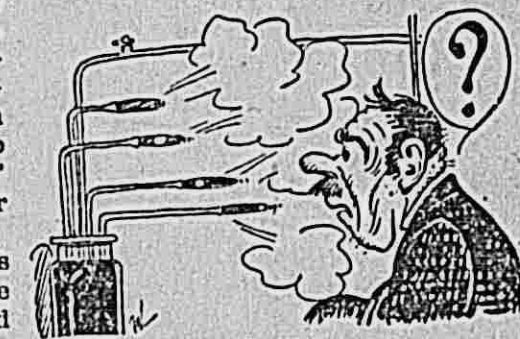

And still the wonder grew as bird after bird submitted itself to the pleasure of the bath. The sparrows, who inhabit two whole trees in the White House grounds when they are at home for a night's rest, found it so good that they quarreled for place and turn.

Then a few thrushes who live in the precincts acquired the shower-bath habit. And finally the pigeons and doves, slowest to adopt new customs, were converted. So the shower-bath cult has grown among the birds.

There are a half dozen such lawn sprinklers scattered over the White House grounds, with purpose or hope to make the grass grow. They are going all day, scattering drops of rain in an ever revolving circle. As is modest, the birds take their shower baths in secluded spots where the sprinklers are at work.

"Old Nick," the Champion Long-Distance Smoker

UNCLE SAM has the champion long-distance smoker of the world, consuming 1,000 cigars a day on an average. They call him "Old Nick," not because he is in any way diabolic, but because he can hold an amazing amount of nicotine. And it takes very little effort of the imagination to characterize "Old Nick" as a human being; for, in make-up, he performs all the functions of the flesh and blood lover of the weed, even to the action of the lungs. "Old Nick" is merely an ingenious apparatus for testing cigars.

Uncle Sam's mechanical man is no fastidious chooser of what he smokes. The most expensive imported brand and the humblest of the domestic are the same to him. In the lower left-hand corner of his mechanical anatomy is a jar, in the cork of which are inserted the tubes holding four cigars. The receptacle contains water which takes up the nicotine. So it is cigars that none of it gets into the "lungs" of "Old Nick," and the smoke that goes out from his "mouth"—the exhaust—is wholly free from nicotine. The "lungs" is at the extreme right and inhales and exhales the smoke of the cigars.

A tube leads into the "lung" from the jar into which four individual cigar tubes are placed. There is also an intermediate jar, which arrests whatever of the nicotine may have escaped from the direct repository.

Thus, you see that, while "Old Nick" may be literally soaked in nicotine and be a confirmed "inhaler," he has none of the vice of the inhaler, for the smoke that enters his "lungs" bears no deleterious elements.

One Woman Who Knows Secrets, and Keeps Them

THERE is only one woman in the United States who has knowledge of international events before they happen. Her name is Margaret M. Hanna. She is the confidential secretary and assistant of the second assistant secretary of state, Alvey A. Adee, who is the only permanent official of high rank in the department.

No matter who may be the executive head of the department, and regardless of whether the administration is Democratic or Republican, the course of the foreign office is steered by Mr. Adee. All of the diplomatic affairs are managed by him. The complex unwritten code called international law is to him familiar in its every paragraph, and he has all precedents at his fingers' ends. But it goes without saying that such business involves an immense amount of detail, which is where the peculiar and exceptional talent of Miss Hanna comes into play. She takes all that part of the work off Mr. Adee's hands. To him she is like a card catalogue to a librarian—and quite a bit more, in addition.

Incidentally to her duties she helps to prepare many state papers that are in the last degree confidential in character. She is the custodian of many an important secret affecting the welfare of the country; but, from her point of view, this is merely a part of the day's work. She forgets the secret automatically when she leaves the office and goes home.

It has often been said that a woman cannot keep a secret. Perhaps most women cannot. Holding that belief, wrongly or rightly, the department of state prefers not to employ them in confidential capacities. But the rule is broken in Miss Hanna's case. She knows how to keep a secret, and the government of the United States is willing to bank on her reliability in this regard.

Snake Bite Antidote for Forest Service Men

BEST pocket instruments for treating snake bites, always possibilities among the experiences that befall woodsmen, are to be furnished by the United States forest service to its field employees. The device when not in use is apparently a plain wooden cylinder, about the length of a cigarette and slightly larger in diameter, and has a screw cap on each end. When one of the caps is removed there is disclosed a small lancet, with which the bitten part may be quickly slit open. The other end of the cylinder is hollow and contains a supply of permanganate of potash crystals, one of the most effective antidotes for the poison of snakes' fangs. The crystals are placed in the open wound as soon as possible after the bite is received, and become effective by dissolving and entering the blood. Similar instruments have been used regularly by the field force of the geological survey for several years and have in many cases been the means of saving life.

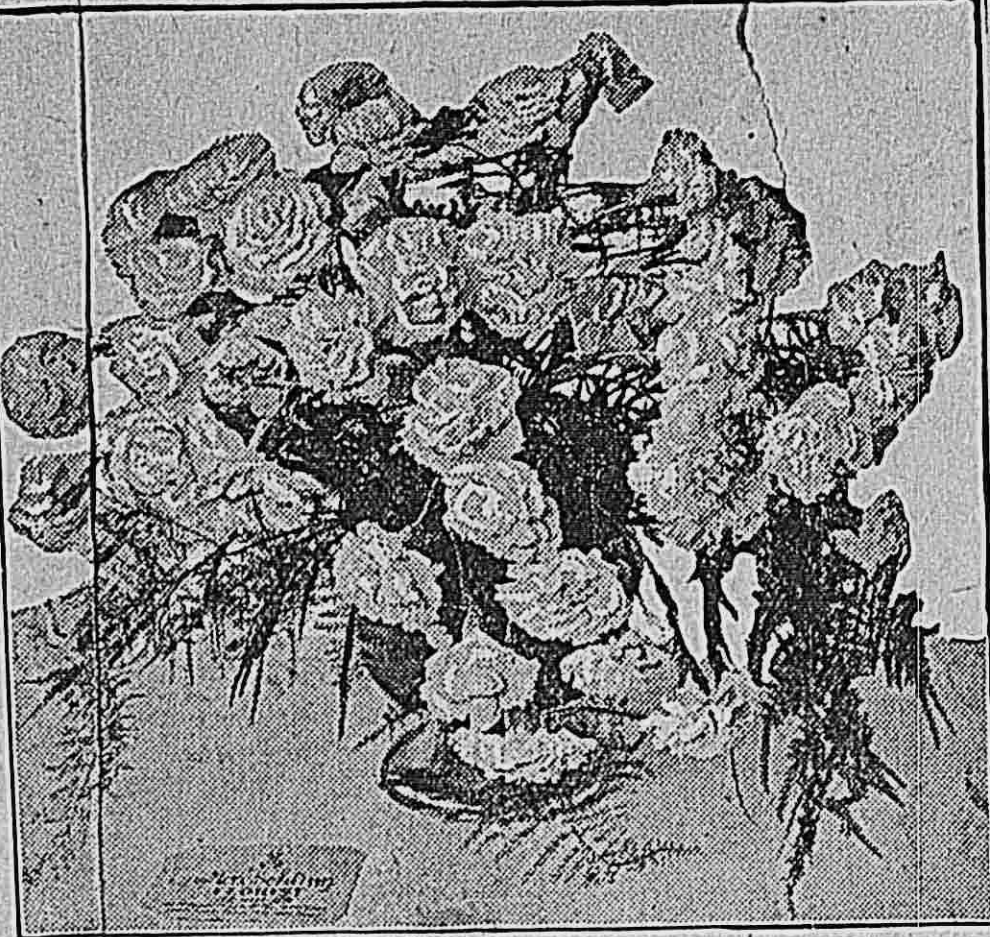

The dangers to which forest workers are subjected of being bitten by poisonous reptiles are forcibly brought out in a recent report to forest service headquarters in Washington from the Shasta national forest in northern California. Three men, sent across the path of a recent fire to fight flames, found themselves completely surrounded by scores of rattlesnakes that had been driven from their rocky lairs by the heat. It was necessary for the fire-fighters to turn snake-fighters, since they could neither advance nor retreat. After a six-hour battle all the reptiles were killed and it was possible for the forest employees to reach and extinguish the fire.

Their Care and Cultivation

Beautiful Specimens of White Carnations.

BULB FOR NEXT SPRING

It would have rich beds of tulip or gladiolus or the corners of your lawns beautiful springlike yellow or white of narcissus, daffodil and jonquill you must begin to think of the early spring appearance of your garden the fall, for the bulbs of these flowers must be planted in the fall before the ground is frozen. In fact this work should be undertaken soon as or before an early frost begins to make the annual flowers the beds look weakened. In dealing with narcissus, which is the family which the daffodil and jonquill belong, it might be well to think of trying to naturalize the narcissus to ground blossom on the lawn much as do wild flowers. How to plant and the bulbs, as well as the best method of getting them to be coming residents of grassy corners, is described in the following directions issued by the bulb specialists of the United States department of agriculture:

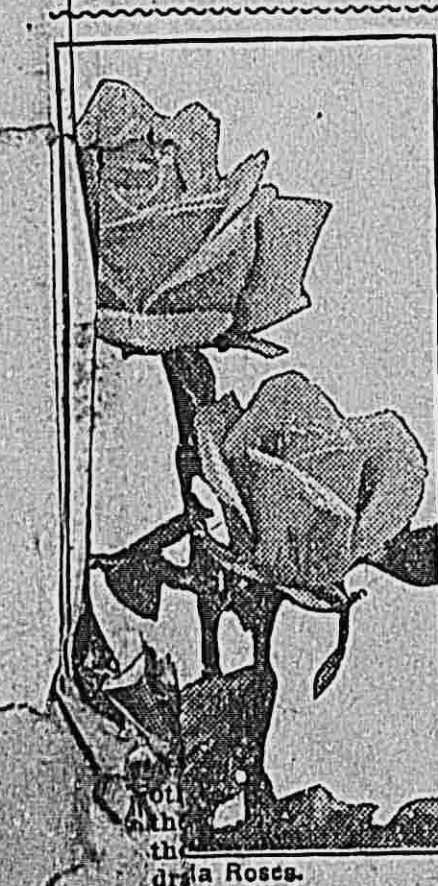

The bulbs should be planted in light soil that has been dug to a depth of at least 10 inches. The bulbs should be set 5 inches apart in rows and the narcissus about 10 inches apart and 5 in deep.

They are to be grown in pots or windowboxes, light, rich soil should be placed one or two inches of finer broken pots in the bottom of pots or boxes to insure good drainage. After planting, place the pots out of doors and cover them about four inches of ashes or or they may be placed in a damp room or cellar for a few weeks until the bulbs have formed a good root. They may then be brought to the light and heat for flowering. Keep the soil well moist from time of planting, but avoid overwatering, for if kept too wet the bulbs will decay.

Cultivation.

When in bed, the surface of the soil should be loosened after each rain and kept free from weeds. In a fall or early winter months it is to cover the beds with a layer of straw or leaves to prevent the young roots from freezing and thawing of the soil. This mulch should be gradually removed in spring, as soon as the plants appear above ground. The bulbs are quite hardy and are not injured by severe cold if the soil is well.

When lifting and dividing, the narcissus plants are to be lifted and divided in autumn and given proper care and conditions will increase and multiply year to year. The bulbs mature in the ground two or three years, until the clumps begin to crowd. After blossoming in the spring six to eight weeks before the foliage to allow the foliage to wither down, when the bulbs may be lifted with a spade or fork.

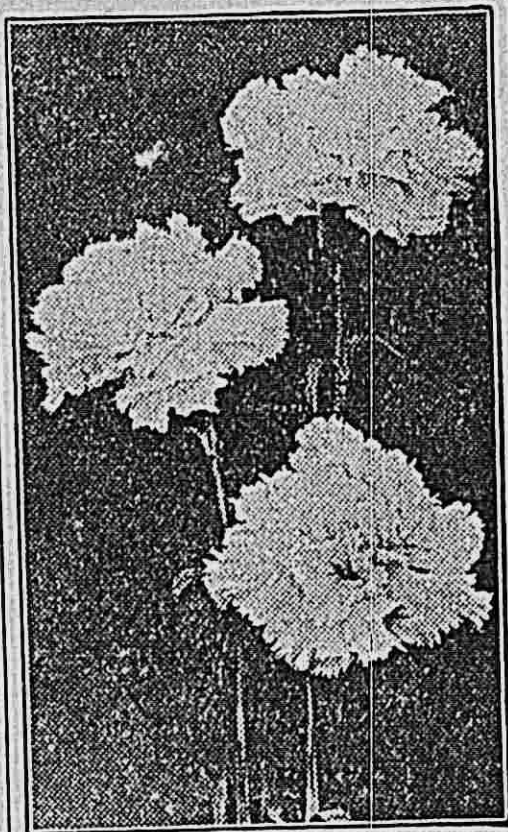

A Rose.

Shake the soil from the roots and store the bulbs in a cool, shady place where they will ripen and cure. When the old leaves and roots are thoroughly dry they may be easily rubbed off and the clusters of bulbs divided. The bulbs may then be planted in the same manner as the original bulbs. In this way the stock may be increased in a few years.

Naturalizing the Narcissus.

The narcissus often becomes naturalized when planted in the sod or partial shade, where it will continue to grow, blossom, and multiply for many years without further attention. Simply make a small hole in the soil five or six inches deep, insert the bulb pointed-end up, press the soil over the top, and nature will do the rest. For naturalizing, avoid planting in rows or rigid geometrical figures. A good plan is to scatter the bulbs like seed and plant where they fall. This method of planting is extensively followed in the home grounds and parks of England and other countries in Europe. In portions of North Carolina, on large estates along the James River in Virginia, and in old gardens in New England, narcissus that were planted over half a century ago are still growing vigorously and every spring produce beautiful displays of blossoms.

Hardy Pinks.

AMONG THE FLOWERS

Among summer blossoms none are greater favorites than the syringa or mock orange, the flowers being as fragrant, as beautiful. While the shrub itself is perfectly hardy, late frosts sometimes kill the buds; and an observing grower gives the rule that there will be orange blossoms when there are peaches.

Calyculanthus is a curious shrub, the brownish blossom being odorous of strawberries; yet with so many beautiful as well as fragrant blossoms it could scarcely need the list.

Purple fringe is an odd plant, the name smoke tree perhaps more accurately describing the appearance after midsummer, when the pedicels lengthen, branch and bear long, plummy hairs, either greenish or tinged with red.

The spigella is handsome when in bloom, the tubular blossoms of white, rose or purple being produced in profusion. A variety with leaves variegated with gold is especially pleasing. Instead of planting in rows the fancy is now to group the shrubs and the flowers for cutting. Place the taller ones in the rear with the shorter ones in front.

Arrange that the blooming season shall be prolonged throughout the summer, and see that no two specimens with blossoms which do not harmonize in color shall be in bloom side by side at the same time.

Plants can wait upon themselves if food, properly prepared, is placed within their reach.

Entertaining White.

A writer gives a little sketch of black and white in Natal. He tells how he came across a white boy, some fourteen years old, and a group of raw natives playing a game. They were shooting with an old muzzle-loading shotgun at a bottle on the top of a case. When the youngster smashed a bottle he received a "lick" (a three-penny bit) from the natives. When a native hit it he received three-pence from the boy.

"That seems a funny sort of game," remarked the witness to the boy.

"Oh, the game's all right, sir," replied the lad. "You see, I load the gun."

A Series of Letters From a
New Comer to Her Mother

Dear Mother

Such a cold that I can hardly talk but that doesn't interfere with my writing. I don't know whether the cold came just in time or whether the King Pharmacy just took this time to advertise Rexall Cherry Bark cough syrup. Anyway the first thing I saw this morning was their ad in which they offer the coupon as 50 cents on a dollar bottle. Me for the drug store and a bottle. Why not when for years we have bought thing at the full price. It seems that the Rexall remedies are comparatively new here and that this idea is merely to show the people just how effective they are. It wouldn't be necessary with us would it? We know the Rexall remedies and know just how satisfactory they have been. Their standard slogan "If not satisfactory simply go to your druggist and say so—get your money—it belongs to you and we want you to have it" appeals to me. It is so too—no fuss simply your money back. Then again Rexall are simply the best that one can buy. Mr. King carries their complete line and tells me that over 7,000 druggists buy together in this way. The saving they make is given the customer so you can see that we benefit by having the Rexall line at King's.

The mill work was placed on the ground today and you never saw such work in your born days. When we placed the order with the Goodrich yard Mr. Hill told us that they handled the "Monogram mill work" and that there was simply none better made anywhere. I am so glad we took his advice. No matter where you look on a home nothing can make as much difference in appearance either for good or bad as the millwork. Even the competitors admit that there is none better than Monogram. It was used in the Bank of Burlington, Burlington, Wis., and that is a beautiful building. This millwork is just another case of the quality effort put forth by the Goodrich yard.

While I was shopping today I dropped into Miss Schaffer's and bought me the dearest little Toque. One that just fits me and fits my pocket book. Of course I heard the cry that it might be cheaper to send away for hats but this is not so. I know because I have shopped in Chicago Millinery stores and it seems to me that with Miss Schaffer I am getting Chicago styles at home prices save the pocket book without in any way detracting from appearance. The fact that Miss Schaffer does her own designing help too for she knows our people, knows what they want. I don't see how anyone can possibly over look the pretty showing here to send away for such a thing as a hat on which so much depends. Miss Schaffer's quality ought to argue a good deal—of course it is not as cheap as we can buy but it is much cheaper than one can possibly buy the same thing for elsewhere. It seems to me that any woman would simply be afraid to trust mail order millinery—be afraid of just one comparison that would offset any ordinary saving. Doesn't it to you. I know that when I was told about it I thought someone else had tried it and just wanted me to be in the same fix. No thanks. I know that Miss Schaffer's styles and quality is good enough for me even though I might save the enormous sum of 17 cents on something not as good by spending a two cent stamp.

Together we have bought all of our builders hardware and bath room fixtures and these are all in town with no waiting. That comes of having a complete stock to trade with. I wouldn't undertake to estimate how large a stock Williams Brothers have got. One whole side of their big store is devoted to Hardware. When it came to making our selection it was real easy. Just what we wanted and at mighty good prices. I've shopped around enough to know that this was so. We bought Devoes paints from them too. It does pay to trade right at home where one is given the stock to select from at the price we found at Williams.

So you knew about our looking at the Overland before I wrote you? I forgot about Billy having seen father in the city. We were lucky in locating Mr. Rosenfeldt for from what I can find the Overland 83 comes nearer giving dollar for dollar than any car on the market. I guess its pretty much as Mr. Rosenfeldt says you come pretty near getting $500 worth of automobile for $500 and $750 for that amount but I really think that when one buys an Overland for $750 they are getting $1000 for $750. Ill tell you why. The Overland factory have the largest output of any factory in the world next to the Ford. They have systematized the manufacture so that on this enormous output they reduce the cost to the absolute minimum. THIS SAVING IN COST OF MANUFACTURE COMES RIGHT BACK TO YOU WHEN YOU BUY AN OVERLAND. I told you the best part of it was the fact that I could drive as well as Billy. The pedals are adjustable and have wide hinged pads while the levers are in the center, within easy reach and the control is simple and convenient. I know that the Overland suits us better than a cheaper car or a more expensive one.

Yes I agree with you that the meats are the most important part of the meal. About 8 out of ten of the things we eat come in tins but with meats one can't always depend on their own judgment. Right then is when it pays to have a butcher that knows. Mr. Powles knows meats and knows how to select the cuts that one wants. It pays too to trade with a market like this and to trade there all the time. In the case of the Powles market it doesn't cost you a cent more than it would to get indifferent service and when one stops to think that the butcher who knows how to cut meats, knows how to make his selections from the market saves you money the combination of service, price and quality looks pretty good to the family pocketbook.

I've been tramping around in the new shoes I bought from Mr. Cribb and while my feet are a little tired they feel good. I took them in and had the buttons set over. While I was waiting I just peeked around over the stock. You should see how carefully selected it is. Mr. Cribb makes his purchases from makers absolutely reputable goods and then stands right behind every sale himself. That is where one gets the best of buying at home—if there should happen to be the least thing wrong with a Cribb shoe its simple "your money back."

I saw a new Mutual movie film at the Antioch theater tonight one of their new releases. I am a regular "movie fan" and I like to go to shows not for the inside of the theater but for the film itself. At the Antioch they can seat 300 people easily and you can choose any seat in the house and really see. This is caused I think by the fact that they have a projection of nearly 75 feet from a machine of the very newest type. Frank Hunt, the owner, told me that he made it a point to select his 4 reels so that the audience could have drama, comics and features. So that they enjoy the whole show. I believe him from what I have seen.

Why don't you write oftener. The home letters count you know.

Mable.

THE HOUSE OF KUPPENHEIMER

TAKE for instance, today's arrival of some twenty or twenty-five fall styles from the house of Kuppenheimer. As a judge of good clothes we wage you would say $30 or $35 would be about right. But you're wrong, the price is $20. Better see these—see them Friday or Saturday (open until every night). It's getting late. It's time you were appearing in new clothes. It is great satisfaction to be well dressed. Kuppenheimer clothes increase that satisfaction.

Be it a hat, some warm underwear, a shirt or two, whatever you need in dependable wearables for men and young men—they're here in greater variety, and at a greater saving than you'll find anywhere else in town.

NEW HATS A vast collection unceasing in new things—exclusively at this store. Pretty new combination effects are the latest in soft hats.

UNDERWEAR The first of the winter is on its way, and we can tell this by the way our excellent lines of underwear are selling these days.

SHIRTS A thing to be fussy about. We take particular pains in offering variety of both conservative and classy designs and colors.

Mr. Juluis Sinykin, Clothing Mgr.

NECKWEAR No better place in town to get the tie you would "brighten up" with. Each week brings the latest cravat creations from foremost makers.

SWEATERS When it's not chilly enough for the burden some overcoat but something is desired, the sweater coat fills the bill perfectly. A vast selection.

SHOES An additional shoe featured here is the celebrated Smith shoe for men. It gives you the best to be had at decidedly moderate prices.

The silver medal contest at the M. E. church last Sunday evening drew a large crowd. Each of the contestants did exceedingly well and it was with difficulty that the decision as to who was the winner could be made. Mr. Freeman, Miss Raymond and Miss Ella Ames acted as judges and in their judgment the honors belonged to Luther Hester who is now proudly wearing a silver medal.

The parcel sale given by the Royal Neighbors Tuesday evening was well attended. The only hitch of the whole evening was the fact that there wasn't enough parcels to satisfy the buyers, but a general good time was had by everybody and all are hoping that the Royal Neighbors may have another sale some day.

Grease the Nail.

All mechanics know that a nail when oiled or greased is much more readily driven through hard woods.

Elmer S. Ellis of Pomona, Cal., has devised a receptacle for grease or other lubricant, to be contained in the handle of a hammer into which the nail can be inserted and withdrawn without wasting the lubricant and at little loss of time.—National Magazine.

Avoiding Danger in Mines.

It is fairly a problem to install motors, controllers and other apparatus in mines in such a way as to avoid the danger of igniting fire damp. Modern practice in Europe now provides three protecting methods—all inclosed, partly inclosed, with use of wire gauze plates, and oil bath apparatus. Various apparatus, such as transformers, controllers and switches, need to have a special design for use in mines, not only on account of fire damp, but because of prevailing dampness and mist.

Safety Pin an Old Idea.

ASSAULTS FOES OF U. S.

PRESIDENT SAYS THAT "OSTRACISM FOR ALL NOT FOR AMERICA FIRST."

MAKES ADDRESS TO D. A. R.

Declares There Have Been Some Citizens in This Country Who Have Not Thought of America First.

Washington, Oct. 13.—President Wilson for the first time bitterly attacked hyphenated Americans who sought to stir up trouble for the United States. His attack was made in a stirring address on Monday before the Daughters of American Revolution, who celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of their society. The president's fiancée, Mrs. Norman Galt, and her mother, Mrs. Bolling, were in the audience.

"I would a great deal rather draw pepper up my nose than incur the hostility and dislike of my neighbors," the president said. "Anything is preferable to ostracism. This is just the sort of discipline should be meted out to those within our borders who do not think of America first."

"Now we have come to a time of special stress and test," the president declared. "There never was a time when we needed more clearly to conserve the principles of our own platform than this present time. There have been some among us who have not thought first of America, who have thought to use the might of America in some matter not of America's origination and they have forgotten that the first duty of a nation is to express its principles in the action of the family of nations and not to seek to aid and abet any rival or contrary ideal."

"I would not be afraid upon the test of 'America first' to take a census of all foreign-born citizens of the United States, for I know that the vast majority of them came here because they believe in America. I am not deceived as to the balance of opinion among the foreign-born citizens, but I am in a hurry to have an opportunity to have a line-up and let the men who are thinking first of other countries to stand on one side—biblically, it should be the left—and all those that are for America first, last and all the time on the other side."

Boston, Oct. 13.—Grover Alexander met his superior in the third game of the world's series here on Monday when he was outpitched by Hubert "Dutch" Leonard, the sterling southpaw of Carrigan's staff, but it was only after the greatest kind of playing that the Red Sox won, 2 to 1, from the Phillies.

A crowd which shattered all attendance records for a baseball game, witnessed the victory of the Red Sox. The figures were given as 42,300.

This victory made it 2 to 1 in favor of the Red Sox.

PRESIDENT AND HIS BRIDE-TO-BE

BULGARS DEFY RUSS TO WAR ON PLAGUE

REPLY TO CZAR'S ULTIMATUM IS UNSATISFACTORY.

British, French, Russian, Italian and Serbian Ministers at Sofia Ask for Passports.

Sofia, Oct. 8, via Paris.—The Russian, French and Italian ministers have asked for their passports. Bulgaria's answer to the Russian ultimatum being unsatisfactory. The Serbian minister also asked for his passports.

London, Oct. 8.—A dispatch to Reuters' Telegram company from Sofia, sent by way of Petrograd, says: "Bulgaria's reply to the Russian ultimatum is unsatisfactory. The Russian minister has notified Premier Radostoff of a rupture of diplomatic relations between the two countries."

"Russian interests in Bulgaria have been consigned to the Dutch charge d'affaires."

King Constantine of Greece, brother-in-law of the German emperor, appears to hold the balance of power of the near East in his hand for the hour.

King Ferdinand of Bulgaria rejected Russia's ultimatum demanding that she break with the central powers and expel German officers who have taken charge of Bulgaria's army staff, and at the same time, say several correspondents, sent an ultimatum to Serbia, allowing twenty-four hours for the cessation of Macedonia to Bulgaria.

The program of the Germanic empires apparently includes consolidation of their field operations with their Turkish allies by sweeping clear a path from Berlin and Vienna to Constantinople. Thus the crucial field of warfare has shifted from the French and Russian fronts to the Balkan peninsula, where German success would mean realization of Emperor William's ambitions for expansion toward India and Asia.

WHEAT RECORDS SMASHED

United States, for First Time in History, Produces Billion Bushels of Grain.

Washington, Oct. 9.—For the first time in its history United States this year produced a billion bushels of wheat. The crop reporting board, department of agriculture, estimated on Thursday that this year's crop based on October 1 indication would total 1,002,000,000 bushels. Last year's output was 891,000,000 bushels. Record crops also were produced in oats and barley. With an estimated output of 1,517,000,000 bushels the oats crop overran the September forecast by 109,000,000 bushels and surpassed any previous crop. The barley crop is 237,000,000 bushels.

WAR GAME COMES TO AN END

United States Is Theoretically Invaded by the Enemy Landing in Delaware Bay.

Washington, Oct. 12.—The United States has been invaded by a foreign foe. The "Red" fleet—theoretically, the enemy—effected a landing in Delaware bay, getting past the "Blue" defending fleet. This brought the "war game" of the Atlantic fleet to an end. Rear Admiral Knight commanding the invading fleet, and Admiral Fletcher directing the "Blue" squadron.

Huerta Minister Is Slain.

Washington, Oct. 12.—A. G. Granados, minister of the interior in the Huerta cabinet, was executed in Mexico City, say state department advices. He was charged with complicity in the killing of President Madero.

Pope Writes to Sultan.

Rome, Oct. 12.—Mgr. Dolci, having reported to the holy see on the sufferings of the Armenians, Pope Benedict has written an autograph letter to the sultan of Turkey interceding for the unfortunate people.

HOOF-AND-MOUTH DISEASE FIGHT TO BEGIN NOVEMBER 26.

Experts to Plan Action at First National Conference to Be Held at Chicago.

Washington, Oct. 9.—The first national conference of experts in hoof-and-mouth disease will be held in Chicago November 26 and 27.

The department of agriculture is sending out the call for the gathering with a view of deciding on plans to wipe out the disease. The federal government and each state is expected to have official representation, along with the packers, the stockyards, the breeders, associations, and banking interests intimately concerned with stock raising.

If accurate figures could be given the shifts in the stock industry of the country as a result of the hoof-and-mouth epidemic would be startling. Department of agriculture officials say that the business is moving westward with great rapidity, and they attribute this to the fact that the epidemic has taken business away from the former leading markets of the country.

Today practically the only state under a federal quarantine is Illinois, and that is in large part because some of the local courts in that state have been willing to interfere with the enforcement of the federal regulations.

Great sections of the live-stock yards in Chicago, as they were described by federal officials recently, are cleaner than ever since they were constructed, but there is no business going on because nobody can ship out of there.

In holding the forthcoming conference it is confidently believed that in the light of recent experience it is now possible to make rules under which a repetition of a national epidemic will be impossible.

FLASHES OFF THE WIRE

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Max Palenske, former assistant cashier of the Drovers' National bank, was indicted by the federal grand jury in connection with the misapplication of funds of the bank. The indictment contains three counts, charging misapplication of funds, the making of false entries and defalcation of $33,000.

Auburn, Neb., Oct. 8.—Church Howe, former consul to Sheffield, England, Montreal, Canada, Palermo, Italy, and Antwerp, Belgium, died at his home here.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 11.—James Kirby, president of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, died here on Friday. An operation for appendicitis was performed and he did not recover from the shock. He was fifty years old.

Montreal, Que., Oct. 9.—The famous parish church at Lachine was destroyed by fire with a loss of $250,000.

Washington, Oct. 11.—The Daughters of the American Revolution held a silver jubilee today in Memorial Continental hall in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the society. Representatives of practically every patriotic organization in the country were on hand for the opening exercises at three o'clock, when President Wilson gave a greeting to the Daughters and their guests.

DISPATCH FROM NISH CLAIMS VICTORY OVER TEUTONS AT BELGRADE.

ADVANCE GUARD WIPED OUT

Statement Asserts Force That Crossed Danube at Capital Were Partly Destroyed and Partly Captured—Bulgaria Officially at War.

London, Oct. 11.—The advance guard of the Austro-Germans which crossed the Danube at Belgrade has been partly destroyed and partly captured, and those who entered Serbian territory across the Save have met with enormous losses, according to an official dispatch received on Friday night by the Serbian legation from Nish.

The Austro-German force that is invading Serbia probably numbers 400,000 men, with a tremendous amount of artillery. It is commanded by Field Marshal von Mackensen.

Serbia and Bulgaria are officially at war. Aviators from Bulgarian territory bombarded Nish Friday night, killing five persons, and the Serbian government handed his passports to the Bulgarian minister. Part of the Bulgarian army has invaded Serbia.

The Bulgarian minister to France has been given his passports.

All the allies' ministers at Sofia, including the Italian, received their passports at Sofia.

The Times correspondent at Athens telegraphs that the Greek government has decided to declare an attitude of benevolent neutrality toward the allies.

An Athens dispatch states that Premier Zaimis and his neutrality cabinet have decided that the terms of the Serbo-Greek alliance do not require the intervention of Greece in the war to defend Serbia.

WILSON TO AID SUFFRAGE

President Issues Formal Statement in Which He Says Question Is Not National but State Issue.

Washington, Oct. 8.—President Wilson came out for woman suffrage. In a formal statement he declared that he would vote in favor of amending the New Jersey state constitution to that effect. His statement follows:

"I intend to vote for woman suffrage in New Jersey because I believe that the time has come to extend that privilege and responsibility to the women of the state; but I shall vote, not as the leader of my party in the nation, but only upon my private conviction as a citizen of New Jersey, called upon by the legislature of the state to express his convictions at the polls.

"I think that New Jersey will be greatly benefited by the change."

Warrior of Today.

George Wharton Pepper said at a luncheon at the Pittsburgh training camp for officers:

"The methods of warfare have changed enormously in the past year. The sword, for example, is no longer carried. The sword has quite disappeared from war."

"A story comes from the Argonne about a French chasseur who took a German officer prisoner. The chasseur, a boy, a tyro, said to the officer: 'Give up your sword.'"

"But the officer shook his head and answered: 'I have no sword to give up. But won't my vitriol spray, my oil projector or my gas cylinder do as well?'"

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed, the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed counterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves, but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.

Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

FRIENDSHIP HIS ONLY IDEA

But We Have a Suspicion That the Young Man Did Not Accept the Father's Offer.

He came into the old gentleman's office with a bright smile.

"I'm the young man who's been calling on your daughter, sir, and I just dropped into say I am not in love with her."

No answer.

"I want to be perfectly square. Curs is a friendship, pure and simple—genuine platonic. We respect each other. We enjoy simple and friendly communion. Just a case of comradeship, pure and unalloyed."

No answer.

"You may think—it would be natural for any man of your vast experience of the world to think—that, even if I feel this way about it, your daughter might unconsciously be falling in love with me only to wake up some day and find her heart broken. Through no fault of my own, you understand. Just one of those unhappy accidents which come. No, sir. Nothing in that. She knows the situation. Purely men tal, I assure you."

The old gentleman wheeled around. "Weren't you kissing my daughter last night in the back parlor?"

The young man smiled again.

"Certainly, sir, certainly. Nothing in that. I assure you—the kiss of friendship. Ever hear of Damon and Pythias? They kissed each other frequently. Jonathan and David also, I, sir, am proud to kiss any friend of mine."

"Um! I suppose you'd put both arms around your friend, hold his lily-white hand in yours and lay his head on your shoulder—just for pure friendship?"

"That's it, sir. Your intuitive mind has grasped the idea. With me friendship is everything."

"And what is your idea of love?"

"Love, sir! Never experienced it. I'm not interested in love. Me for friendship, pure and unalloyed."

"I see—just a few friendly, platonic hugs and friendly kisses and—"

"Exactly, sir. You know."

The old gentleman smiled.

"I'm glad you called," he said. "Nothing like a frank talk to clear up these little matters. Young man, I feel friendly toward you already. No reason, is there, why you and I shouldn't be friends?"

"None, sir. In fact, it's the dearest wish of my heart."

"Good! Then I tell you what. I'm going to send my dear, friendly daughter away tomorrow for a month's vacation. But don't let that make any difference. I'll take her place. Come around and sit in my lap all the evening, will you?"—Life.

That's Different.

"When we want to say something that we don't dare say in English, we use French."

"And when the French want to say something they don't dare say in French?"

"Ah, you could make your fortune in Paris if you could only discover that something."

Why They Don't Go.

"How did it happen you didn't go away during the summer? I thought you were having an extensive outfit prepared for you?"

"That was the trouble. By the time I got the outfit paid for I didn't have any money left."

Getting Even.

"The cook asked for a week off to get married, so I gave it to her."

"I don't think I would have done that. You can't spare her very well now."

"I know I can't, but it was the only way I saw to ever get even with her."

Jap Explains How Family Was Enabled to Use One Fan Two or Three Generations.

Among the Japanese economy is held to be a high virtue. Two old misers of Tokyo were one day discussing ways and means of saving.

"I manage to make a fan last about twenty years," said one, "and this is my system: I don't wastefully open the whole fan and wave it carelessly. I open only one section at a time. That is good for about a year. Then I open the next, and so on until the fan is eventually used up."

"Twenty years for a good fan!" exclaimed the other. "What sinful extravagance! In my family we use a fan for two or three generations, and this is how we do it: We open the whole fan, but we don't wear it out by waving it. Oh, no! We hold it still, like this, under our nose, and wave our face!"—Everybody's.

TRAGIC INCIDENT OF WARFARE ALONG THE MEXICAN BOUNDARY

Correspondent Tells of the Hospitality Extended to Him by a Mexican Couple Across the Rio Grande—Host Declains Against the Depredations of the Bandits—Later an American Farmer Tips Off Some "Real News."

By JOHN W. ROBERTS.
(International News Service.)
Brownsville, Tex. — "Que huvole, amigo? Paso usted, you are well received."

I had ridden up on my horse to a little mud hut on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, and as I arrived I was met by four dogs, barking loudly, and the lord and master of the place—a small Mexican of many smiles and gleaming white teeth—who came forward to greet me.

"It is a very warm day, señor! Come into this house, which is yours, and permit me to unsaddle your horse so that he can feed on the bountiful grass which God has given us."

"My name is Roberts," I said, dismounting. "I am a newspaper man, and I came up this way for a ride." He stretched his hand in greeting. "Ramon Martinez, at your orders," he smiled. "While you are here please consider me your most humble servant."

I unsaddled my pony, and threw the saddle on the shady side of the adobe hut. Ramon removed the bridle, and with an affectionate slap at the beast's haunches, drove him out to the grass in the open prairie.

"Won't he get away?" I asked. "No, señor; he is hungry, therefore I will spend all his time filling his now, into my house, señor; is terrible here, and besides just in time for the dinner good wife is cooking."

"Use" had, as I thought, only in one corner, neatly rolled he wall, was some bedding served as settees. A number of calendars decorated the walls. Beneath them was a crucifix, under which a candle burned. At the other end of the room squatted a very pretty young girl, her perspiring brow as we and smiled prettily when her introduced me.

Host Is Amazed. "Is terrible," she laughed. "I do not have taken your good invitation you to partake of a dinner meal. We have nothing but tortillas and frijoles and coffee."

"Is there no chili?" her husband asked in surprise. "Oh, yes—and chili."

"Sit down, amigo," Ramon said, "and if I may be so rude as to ask you for a cigarette, we can smoke in comfort while Amalia cooks dinner."

I offered him my red case, from which he took a long, cork-tipped cigarette.

"Ah! Muy fino," he said, as he puffed eagerly. "You must be a very rich man."

"No," I laughed. "Those only cost twenty-five cents, gold, a box."

"Veinte-cinco centavos oro!" he screamed in amazement. "Why, why, that means twenty-five dollars of our money!" His astonishment was unlimited.

"What do you think of the warfare across the river?" I asked him. "Is it true that you Mexicans intend to invade our country? What does all this mean?"

The question seemed to amuse Ramon immensely and he slapped his knee and roared in laughter. "I was just discussing with my wife how foolish you Americans were to believe such tales. Most of the warfare going on over there is caused by the bad feeling between the Mexicans living in your own country and the American settlers. A lot of the Mexicans, of course, are brigands, who have been kicked out of the Carranzista army, and having nowhere else to go, cross over into Texas and enrich themselves by gathering a small band of partisans and then raiding unprotected ranches of your countrymen. Of course, they carry guns, and if they are shot at, they return the fire, but as for war between the two nations—ah! It is very funny," and his body shook again as he laughed.

More Foolishness. "What about the plan of San Diego," I asked. "In which all Mexicans are invited to join an army which is going to invade the United States and capture Texas?"

"That is more foolishness which should not be taken seriously. It is the blind which these bandit leaders use to take men into their hands. As far as plans go, mi señor, could not you, or I, draw up elaborate proclamations in which we declared war against the whole world? Does that mean that we could capture the world, or make an efficient warfare? Ridiculous!"

"Dinner is served," Amalia, blushing furiously, interrupted our conversation. She stood up and was wiping the perspiration from her face with a clean white towel. Next in appearance, round of figure, a delicate complexion and pretty white teeth gleaming in her soft red mouth, made Amalia an unusually attractive girl to look upon.

The dinner was served on a clean, white table cloth, which had been spread out on the dirt floor. I was given the seat of honor, which was a soap box, while my hosts squatted themselves on the floor opposite me.

"You must excuse the meal," Amalia reiterated. "Four years of revolution has brought us hard times, and the job that my good husband Ramon had on an American ranch across the river—he lost it because of the trouble there. At that time we lived very happily because Ramon made a dollar a day, and we lived in some comfort, but since these bandits began to raid your ranches, the American will not tolerate a Mexican on his premises. I am so sorry," she finished, casting a loving look at her husband, "because Ramon is very good. He never beats me and always gives me most of what he earns."

Like in all Mexican homes of the lower classes, we had no spoons nor forks, so, as is the custom, we shoveled the beans and chile from the plates into our mouths with a piece of flat tortilla. The coffee, which was very weak and sugary, I could not drink. I explained to Amalia that I never drank coffee.

Down to Last Meal. "Oh! I should have offered you some milk. I have some fresh goat's milk here which is very good." She arose and fetched an earthenware jar from which she poured the white liquid into my cup. Gingly I tasted it. It was my first experience with goat's milk, and I did not like it. In the first place, it is of a greenish yellow and much too sticky to drink in comfort. It had a strong smell of the sheep corral. However, so as not to disappoint my good hostess I placed the cup to my lips, held my breath and literally poured the liquid down my throat.

When we arose from our meal, I offered Ramon another cigarette which he accepted with alacrity. Amalia, in the meanwhile, was busily engaged in clearing the "table" and washing the dishes.

"She is a good woman," Ramon said lovingly as he watched her. "I have been unable to find any work since I was fired two weeks ago and I don't know what I am going to do. You may not believe it, señor, but we have provisions for only one more meal."

He hung his head as he puffed silently at his cigarette.

"Damn those banditos!" He shook his fist fiercely towards the United States. "If those crazy compatriots of mine had not started this trouble I would not be in this condition. It is due to them only that my Amalia has nothing to eat for the morning. It is due to them that we, the pacificos, suffer the name of 'bandit greasers.' I do not blame the Americans; they are defending their property and their families—I would do the same if the trouble were on this side, but I blame that band of disgruntled thieves who, unable to make a living on this side, start a racial war in your country. Four years of revolution has cleaned everything out of this country and our only hope to get anything to eat was on your side of the river. Now that is gone, and—ah! Dios, I do not know what we are going to do. I will not permit Amalia to go hungry," he added fiercely. "If it needs be I will sacrifice my life to get her food."

"You should not talk like that," admonished Amalia, who had finished her work as she came towards us. "It is a sacrifice to talk like that. God will punish you." Amalia sat besides me and began to chatter laughingly about the two goats she owned. Imitating their gestures with her pretty hands, she told how the goats butted one another in an effort to capture some delicacy which she offered. She told me of Pedro, a pet horned toad which she had owned for five years.

"He will come whenever I call him," she added. "Pedro! Pedro! Pedro! Vente pa aca."

Almost immediately the little flat head of the intelligent pet peeped through the open doorway. The glaring sunlight played upon the colors on his fat belly. He scrambled over the threshold and came running towards his mistress. She picked him up and held him lovingly to her cheek. "Pedrito, Pedrito," she cried caressingly, "I love you so much!" and she walked to the other end of the room where she fed him a large piece of tortilla.

"Well, Ramon, I must be going now," I said. "Let's get my horse. You don't know how much I enjoyed you and your wife's company, and how refreshed I am with the meal."

"But it is early yet," Amalia protested.

"I must be back in Brownsville by five o'clock," I replied. In a few minutes Ramon had saddled my horse and brought it to the door of the hut. He and his wife, the horned toad, the four dogs and the two little goats were all there to see me off. I stuck my hand in my pocket to reach for money, and found I had two dollars. I held them out to Ramon.

"No! No! No!—valgame dios—impossible! You were my guest and I cannot accept your money."

I knew by the earnestness in his voice that my money would not be accepted, so going into the cabin as though I had forgotten something, I threw the two dollars on the bedding. Then I mounted my horse and rode away, Ramon and his wife remaining in the doorway until I disappeared around the corner of the hills.

The End of the Story. Four days later Floyd Gibbons of the Chicago Tribune and I were riding from Brownsville to Harlingen where Col. R. L. Bullard, commanding the American troops along the Rio Grande, was stationed. We stopped at a farmhouse on the way to get a drink of water. An old American rancher, whom we knew, met us at the gate.

"Are you the fellows looking out for news?" he queried. "Yes," answered Gibbons. "We are going over to see Colonel Bullard."

"That's fine," answered the man at the gate. "You can give him a message from me. Tell him that I killed one of the greaser bandits last night."

"Is that so?" commented Gibbons. "Did he attack you?"

"Nope."

"Was he armed?"

"Nope. But I caught him running off with two of my chickens and a bag of corn. He said that he was hungry and was taking the stuff to his wife, but they all pull that kind of stuff around here. They put a sorrowful tale when you catch them, and if you turn around they will knife you in the back."

"Humph," said Gibbons. "Will you let us see him?"

"Sure," invited the old farmer. "Come right along," and he led the way to a clump of mesquite beyond his chicken coop.

"There is the old devil," he pointed to the pathetic figure of a small Mexican huddled there on the ground—stone dead.

I kicked him over with my foot and beneath the clots of blood which were plastered on his once pleasant face I recognized Ramon.

"Poor Amalia!" I gasped aloud. "What's that?" the farmer asked.

"Nothing," I said as I walked away. We got our drink of water, mounted, and rode away.

"The old farmer sure enough got one of the bandits," said Gibbons laughing.

"Shut up, damn you!" I answered, much to his surprise.

MILE FOR EACH OF 91 YEARS

Aged Pennsylvania Woman on Birthday Auto Spin Wishes She Were Hundred.

Colwyn, Pa.—Fond of automobile riding, despite her age, Mrs. Charlotte Welsh of this city celebrated her ninety-first birthday by taking a 91-mile spin, accompanied by members of her family.

When assisted out of the car at the end of the trip, she smilingly said: "It's too bad it wasn't my hundredth anniversary; I would have had another nine miles!"

U.S. TO AID CARRANZA

LANSING HINTS AT RECOGNITION AFTER PAN-AMERICAN MEET.

EMBARGO IS BELIEVED NEAR

Villa and Leaders of Other Factions Will Be Unable to Obtain Munitions—Skinner Expected to Be Appointed Ambassador to Republic.

Washington, Oct. 12.—A formal announcement was made on Saturday by the secretary of state following a Pan-American conference which assures the recognition of Gen. Venustiano Carranza as president de facto of Mexico.

Here is the statement issued by Mr. Lansing.

"The conference, after careful consideration of the facts, have found that the Carranzista party is the only party possessing the essentials for recognition as the de facto government of Mexico, and they have so reported to their respective governments."

In accordance with this decision the United States immediately will accredit a diplomatic representative to General Carranza.

It is believed in Washington the European governments will follow the lead of the United States.

The president is considering Robert P. Skinner, who has been withdrawn as consul general in London because of British objections to the character of trade reports he submitted to the state department, for appointment as ambassador to the Carranza government.

Diplomatic relations thus being restored between the United States and Mexico, as presided over by General Carranza, President Wilson will enter into negotiations for settlement of the various questions which have arisen as a result of the revolutions that have devastated the neighborhood "republic."

It will be the president's duty, in accordance with the obligations to the head of a friendly state, to prevent the United States from serving as a base for revolutionary movements.

He will issue a proclamation reapplying the embargo on munitions, as far as Mexico is concerned.

In other words, General Villa is no longer to enjoy any support from this country.

"Fighting continues all along the Danube and Save fronts."

"The enemy suffered enormous losses in making unsuccessful attacks on the lower Drina."

Berlin, Oct. 12 (via London).—The official statement issued here on Sunday is as follows:

In the Balkans: The city of Belgrade and the heights to the southwest and to the southeast have fallen into our hands. The Serbians were thrown back from their positions further to the east and we are still advancing.

BELL DENIES ALL CHARGES

Indianapolis Mayor Says He Didn't Give Bills to "Bud" Gibson—Explains Receipt.

Indianapolis, Oct. 9.—Practically a complete denial of having knowledge of wrongdoing on the part of anybody in the primaries, registration sessions and general election was made on Thursday by Mayor Joseph E. Bell, on the witness stand in his own behalf in the case in which he is accused of conspiring to commit a felony at the primaries, registration sessions and general election of 1914, in the criminal court. Bell denied that he gave James ("Bud") Gibson $11 in one-dollar bills election day and asserted, in explanation of the testimony concerning the receipt by himself of $500 from Lucius O. Hamilton, that it formed a part of a payment amounting to $3,070 credited on the treasurer's report to himself and Thomas Taggart.

Examination in chief of Mayor Bell was concluded at the time Judge W. H. Elchhorn adjourned court.

Sick Women Attention

Is it possible there is a woman in this country who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for women—and every year we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

From Mrs. S. T. Richmond, Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"For the benefit of women who suffer as I have done I wish to state what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I did some heavy lifting and the doctor said it caused a displacement. I have always been weak and I overworked after my baby was born and inflammation set in, then nervous prostration, from which I did not recover until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The Compound is my best friend and when I hear of a woman with troubles like mine I try to induce her to take your medicine."—Mrs. S. T. Richmond, 84 Progress Avenue, Providence, R. I.

From Mrs. Maria Irwin, Peru, N. Y.

PERU, N. Y.—"Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was very irregular and had much pain. I had lost three children, and felt worn out all the time. This splendid medicine helped me as nothing else had done, and I am thankful every day that I took it."—Mrs. MARIA IRWIN, R.F.D. 1, Peru, N. Y.

From Mrs. Jane D. Duncan, W. Quincy, Mass.

SOUTH QUINCY, MASS.—"The doctor said that I had organic trouble and he doctored me for a long time and I did not get any relief. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and I tried it and found relief before I had finished the first bottle. I continued taking it all through middle life and am now a strong, healthy woman and earn my own living."—Mrs. JANE D. DUNCAN, Forest Avenue, West Quincy, Mass.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.
